

2010 Design Trends

Recently there has been a huge interest in "going green" and focusing on organic and environmentally friendly products. Along with furniture and building materials following suit, this trend to be more eco-friendly has naturally transferred into the paint palettes of Interior Design. 2010 colors focus on earthbound tones. The base for all the color palettes can be made up from Neutrals, while focusing on splashes of colors such as rich greens and browns. This in mind, mixing earth tones with bright bold colors also seems to be a trend for the upcoming year as they prove more and more to be quite complimentary to one another. Such colors or tones which are forecasted to be popular include vibrant Purples, orange and yellows. Expect to see browns, greens and other neutrals in combination with various hues of orange especially. The number of individuals who are becoming less afraid to play and experiment with color in their spaces are growing. Keep in mind that bright punches of color when paired with rich greens and deep brown earth tones are an organic combination which serve to set a tranquil atmosphere to any space. We also found that Purple is beginning to make a comeback. Rich plum purples and vibrant violet hues are ideal for 2010. They represent a unique standpoint, reflect romance and not unlike the earthy greens spoken of; create a calm and relaxing atmosphere to one's space.
